

June 2, 2017

Dear Parents,

This is the time of year when most of us are preparing for the end of the school year: planning vacations, previewing summer assignments and reading lists, and looking forward to the end of school.

During this busy time of year you may not have noticed that our schools have not received our annual standardized testing results, the TerraNova. We are not alone. The parent company of the publisher, Data Recognition Corp., has experienced major delays in delivering results to all our Catholic schools in New Jersey. This delay is due to the company's need to change platforms for reporting results. This is a one-time migration that will not impact our testing in the future.

We have been advised to expect a mid to late June delivery date. Each school has been informed and will disseminate the information to you once received, most likely via mail.

We apologize for this unforeseen delay and will continue to provide updates as we receive them.

Sincerely,

Sister Merris
